

Jerrell Lee - Brandon

Jerrell Lee is originally from Florida, and was a two-sport athlete at The University of Kentucky playing football and baseball. After spending a year coaching football at Drake University in Iowa, he decided to move to Los Angeles and follow his dreams of becoming an actor. Jerrell received his first break on the hit television show, "Six Feet Under", playing the role of Anthony in the series finale. In 2007 he moved to Boston, where he soon discovered that he was a small fish in a small pond, and began to work regularly as an actor. He performed in various stage productions in Boston such as: AS YOU LIKE IT as part of the Shakespeare in the Park production by the Commonwealth Shakespeare Company, and in CORIALANUS produced by the Actor's Shakespeare Company. Shortly after, other acting opportunities came knocking where he had supporting roles in films such as "The Proposal" starring Sandra Bullock and Ryan Reynolds, "Knight & Day" starring Tom Cruise and Cameron Diaz. Since moving back to Los Angeles in 2010, Jerrell has been studying with Ivanna Chubbuck at the Ivanna Chubbuck Studio, and been a part of several theater works, as well as a television role on the FOX show "Breaking In," and most recently a feature titled "Halfway to A Blackout." Jerrell is honored to be a participant of CAGES, as well as the Stella Adler Theatre.
